SIEPMANN'S GERMAN SERIES.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

Of the Series as a whole.

SCHOOL BOARD CHRONICLE.—"An admirable plan is followed, by which each book becomes the pivot on which the instruction is made to turn. A special feature is an appendix of words culled from the text, in progressive order, and designed for viva voce drill in classes. The utility of such a practice is attested by all teachers who have given it a fair trial. Prose exercises based on the text are added. If the plan of the editor is consistently carried out, the study of each successive work furnishes the student, not only with an enlarged vocabulary, but also with linguistic facility in the use of it. An interesting innovation is the inclusion of 'Volkslieder,' set to music, which certainly introduces an essential characteristic of German life. It is moreover an expedient which affords one of the most helpful exercises in memorising, and in acquiring at an early stage some ease in the use of the spoken tongue. Maps and genealogical tables are added where required; and a full vocabulary in the elementary series."

DUBLIN DAILY EXPRESS.—"The advanced German series which is being brought out by Macmillan & Co., under the general editorship of Mr. Otto Siepmann, reaches, perhaps, the highest standard of critical and literary excellence that has ever been touched in publications of this class. They are much more than school-books, and even good German scholars may be glad to have the German classics in editions prepared with so much care and accompanied with an 'apparatus criticus' containing, in itself, much literary interest."

PUBLISHERS' CIRCULAR.—"The general get-up of the series deserves special mention; the printing leaves nothing to be desired, and the binding is a model of neatness. The series is a splendid example of what can be done in the way of making a royal road to learning."

UNIVERSITY CORRESPONDENT.—"The texts are interesting, well printed and bound, and the notes are excellent, and not merely intended to save trouble to teacher and taught. The appendices, four to each volume, are the distinguishing feature of the series. The first consists of the most important words and phrases occurring in the book. It is meant for viva voce drill and cannot fail to rapidly increase the vocabulary of the learner. There are also English sentences and continuous passages on the vocabulary and constructions of the text. We are convinced that this method is the only sound one of teaching composition. . . . We feel certain that the proper use of these appendices by a competent teacher will ensure the rapid progress of the pupils. We wish all success to the series, than which there is no better."

GLASGOW HERALD.—"Of the series generally we should say that if further contributions to it reach the high standard which these volumes (Sappho, Zwischen den Schlachten) have set up, it will be one of the very best ever offered to the scholastic public."

DIE NEUEREN SPRACHEN (Viator, Dörr, Rambeau).—"Alle diese Ausgaben zeugen von guter Sachkenntnis und ernster Arbeit. Die Herausgeber sind offenbar bemüht, Besseres zu liefern, als vielfach früher auf den englischen Markt kam."

"Den Siepmannschen Ausgaben sieht man an, wie sie darauf berechnet sind, wirklich in den Mittelpunkt des Sprachunterrichts gestellt zu werden."

"The 'Word- and Phrasebooks,' price 6d., give the English and German (in parallel columns) of the list of words and phrases for viva voce drill which are given in the first appendix to the editions belonging to this Series."

ELEMENTARY.

EBNER.—Walther von der Vogelweide. Edited by E. H. G. NORTH, Wellington College. 2s.

GUARDIAN.—"Only such scenes have been chosen for inclusion in the present volume as are essentially dramatic and as such likely to appeal to the imagination of the schoolboy, and Mr. North has been very successful in his choice."

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"This work gives an insight into an exceedingly interesting historical as well as literary period of the twelfth century. . . . Introduction, notes, vocabulary, and appendices all help to make this elementary textbook a model reader for school study."

GOEBEL.—Hermann der Cherusker. Edited by J. ESSER, Madras College, St. Andrews. 2s.

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"The text is fairly simple, and the excellent notes prevent the student from digressing too far from the paths of accuracy. A full apparatus of useful tables, vocabulary, and appendices complete a work which should find speedy favour with teachers desiring a workable and efficient reading-book."

SCHOOL WORLD.—"A capital addition to the elementary German texts in Mr. Siepman's Series. The story of the great national hero Arminius is told in bright and simple German, and in a way which will interest boys and girls."

GOEBEL.—Rübezahl. Edited by D. B. HURLEY, Newcastle Middle School. 2s.

JOURNAL OF EDUCATION.—"A capital reader for second-year pupils. . . . Mr. Hurley has done his work as editor very thoroughly."

HANSJACOB.—Aus dem Leben eines Unglücklichen. Edited by Miss E. DIXON, Girton College, Cambridge. 2s.

ATHENÆUM.—"An excellent specimen of writing by a living German, whose narrative is both simple and effective. . . . An admirable school book."

SCHRADER.—Friedrich der Grosse. Edited by R. H. ALLPRESS, City of London School. 2s.

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"Furnished with all the aids necessary to the student; the text is simple and interesting. . . . Thoroughly practical and likely to be effective."

WACHENHUSEN.—Vom ersten bis zum letzten Schuss. Edited by T. H. BAYLEY, Loretto School. 2s. 6d.

JOURNAL OF EDUCATION.—"Mr. Bayley's book is an excellent addition to our German school-texts, and deserves a hearty welcome."

GUARDIAN.—"Hans Wachenhusen was war correspondent for the Cologne Gazette during the Franco-Prussian War of 1870. . . . The incidents are vividly detailed, and the book is full of such graphic descriptions of events removed by so short a period from their own lifetime as can hardly fail to arouse the interest of young students."

von WILDENBRUCH.—Das edle Blut. Edited by OTTO SIEPMANN, Clifton College. 2s.

ATHENÆUM.—"This recent addition to Siepman's German Series is unusually good. Wildenbruch is in many respects a suitable author for the class-room . . . and Das edle Blut is one of the most attractive of his shorter stories. Its value as a textbook is increased by the fact that it is natural in style and thoroughly German in tone, and that much of it is instructively colloquial and idiomatic."

ZASTROW.—Wilhelm der Siegreiche. Edited by E. P. ASH, Haileybury College. 2s.

SCHOOL WORLD.—"This is quite the best text that has appeared, so far, in the elementary section of Mr. Siepman's German Series; it presents an excellent picture of William I. . . . The style is simple and straightforward."

Now Ready.

ADVANCED.

ELSTER.—Zwischen den Schlachten. Edited by Dr. HIRSCH, Alleyn's School, Dulwich. 3s. 6d.

SATURDAY REVIEW.—"The style is easy and interesting, besides being singularly free from the complicated grammatical structure which so often defaces the prose of German authors."

EDUCATIONAL REVIEW.—"We venture to recommend this book very warmly to all schoolmasters for use in their schools. Mr. Siepmann's method is to our mind an excellent one."

FONTANE.—Vor dem Sturm. Edited by Prof. WEISS, R.M.A., Woolwich. 3s.

EDUCATIONAL TIMES.—"A good story well told, likely to interest young readers. It is furnished with brief and satisfactory introductions by Professor Weiss, who has also written capital notes."

SCHOOL WORLD.—"A capital tale of the winter of 1812-13, with a life of Fontane, a brief historical introduction and thoroughly satisfactory notes."

FREYTAG.—Die Ahnen. Part I. Ingo. Edited by OTTO SIEPMANN, Clifton College. 3s. 6d.

GOETHE.—Iphigenie auf Tauris, ein Schauspiel von Wolfgang von Goethe. Edited by H. B. COTTERILL, M.A. 3s.

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"Adding to and excellently supplementing Cotterill's skilful annotation are appendices of great worth by the General Editor of the series."

SCHOOLMASTER.—"Mr. Cotterill is an experienced editor, and he has here done justice to Goethe's work. The very readable introduction of some sixty pages should meet with careful attention from the student, who will also find valuable assistance in mastering the text from the editor's numerous and copious notes."

GRILLPARZER.—Sappho, Trauerspiel. Edited by Prof. RIPP-MANN, Queen's College, London. 3s.

SPECTATOR.—"Will be acceptable to all students of German literature. Professor Rippmann has discharged his task with great care and skill. His notes are exhaustive, while in the introduction he gives us an interesting sketch of Grillparzer's curious personality."

EDUCATIONAL TIMES.—"A thoroughly literary edition of Grillparzer's admirable play, and we give it a hearty welcome. . . . Mr. Siepmann will be fortunate if he can keep his series up to the standard of the first volume."

KURZ.—Die Humanisten. Edited by A. VÖGELIN, St. Paul's School, London. 2s. 6d.

SCHOOL WORLD.—"The style is good; the text is well printed; and the notes supplied by the editor are thoroughly satisfactory."

EDUCATIONAL NEWS.—"A tale of incident and amusement, most intelligently told. . . . Admirably adapted for pupils so far advanced as to occupy places in the fifth and sixth forms."

von SCHEFFEL.—Der Trompeter von Säckingen. Edited by E. L. MILNER-BARRY, Mill Hill School. 3s. 6d.

GUARDIAN.—"A well-printed and well-edited edition of a fine product of modern German literature. The notes are very complete, and there is an interesting sketch of the author's career by way of introduction."

SCHOOL WORLD.—"Excellently edited."
