

UNIVERSITÄTS-
BIBLIOTHEK
PADERBORN

Universitätsbibliothek Paderborn

Miscellaneous works Of The Late Philip Dormer Stanhope, Earl Of Chesterfield

Consisting Of Letters to his Friends, never before printed, And Various Other Articles

Chesterfield, Philip Dormer Stanhope of Dublin, 1777

Index To The Miscellaneous Pieces.

urn:nbn:de:hbz:466:1-52092

I N D E X

T O T H E

MISCELLANEOUS PIECES.

A.

ADMINISTRATION (writers for). Paper against them, 72—76.

Affectation. All kinds of censured, p. 62—66. Ridiculed, 196—198.

Alexander (opera of). Singular circumstance in it, 163.

Arnall (Mr. writer of the Free Briton). Anecdote of, 5, in the note.

B.

Bill, (proposed in parliament for the regulation of theatrical entertainments.) Strictures upon, 47—51. Its insufficiency to answer the end proposed, 47, 48. Its disadvantages in the restraints it lays upon genius, 49. Its injuries to the public, 50, 51. Speech upon it, 229—241. Reasons for its being proposed, 228, 229.

C.

Chesterfield (Earl of). His papers in Fog's Journal, 1—19. His humorous account of a waxen army, 3—5. His political and allegorical paper on the ears, 8—14. His political essay on the eyes, 14—19. His writings in a periodical paper called Common Sense, 20—108. His introduction and account of its title, 20—26. His proposal for weighing the members of the State, 26—31. His remarks upon dress, 31—36. His paper upon honor, 36—41. His description of a man of honor, 38.

VOL. II.

His explanation of and comments upon a political allegory, from Du Halde's account of China, 42—46. His remarks on the bill proposed in parliament for licensing and regulating the theatres, 46—51. His paper against it, 51—56. His paper on the country retreat of members of parliament after the session, 56—61. His paper on affectation, 62—66. His censure of female coxcombs, 67—72. His paper against the writers of administration, concerning the regulation of the theatres, 72—76. His observations upon the dangers ladies are exposed to on their first coming to town in January, 77—83. His paper upon gluttony and the luxury of the table, 84—90. His vindication of lord Lyttelton against the writers of the Gazetteer, 90—93. His paper on antient and modern music, 94—98. His strictures on the taste for French fashions, 99—104. His paper on the connections between England and Hanover, 104—108. His miscellanies in a periodical paper called Old England, or The Constitutional Journal, 108—118. His censures of the ministry, 108—114. His account of the method of conducting the paper, 114—118. His writings in a periodical paper called The World, 108—127. His account of a country gentleman going to Paris with his family, 118—126. His remarks on nostrums and specifics,

U

- specifics, 126—129. His account of a singular method of short writing, 129—132. Exposés the danger of reading romances, 132—136. His remarks on the little benefit accruing to Englishmen from their travels, 136—141. His ironical commendation of the present times, 142—147. His account of the members of a club, 147—152. His description of a club-dinner, 152—156. His reflection on his entertainment there, 157—161. His essay on the Italian opera, 161—165. His remarks on the necessity of an English dictionary, and his recommendation of doctor Johnson's, 166—169. His humorous observations on the English language, 170—174. His remarks on the prevailing custom among ladies of painting, 174—178. His account of the reception of the paper, 179—183. His remarks on the utility of prejudices, 183—186. His paper on duelling, 186—191. His paper on the pride of birth, 191—195. His paper on affectation, 195—198. His advice to the ladies on their return into the country, 199—202. His essay on civility and good breeding, 203—206. His account of people of fashion, 206—213. His paper upon decorum, 213—218. His essay on passion, 218—222. His paper on the supposed degeneracy of the times, 223—227. His speech on the bill for licensing the theatres, 229—241. His first speech on the gin act, 242—248. His second ditto, 248—260. His letter on taking leave of the States General, &c. in 1732, 261—263. His speech on the same occasion, in 1745, 265—267. His speech as lord lieutenant, to both houses of parliament at Dublin, in 1745, 268—270. Ditto, in 1746, 270—272. His character of Baron Montesquieu, 273. His letter to Mr. de Bougainville, 275—277. His letter of thanks to the Academy of inscriptions and belles lettres, on being chosen a foreign member, 277—281. His preface to Mr. Hammond's Love Elegies, 282, 283. His character of lord Scarborough, 284—287.
- Civility.* Distinction between that and good breeding, 203—206.
- Club.* Members of it described, 149—152. The dinner described, 152—156. Reflections upon it, 157—161.
- Common Sense* (a periodical paper so called) extracts from, 20—108.
- N^o 1. Introduction to the paper, and account of the title, 20—26.
- N^o 3. Humorous proposals for weighing the members of the State, 26—31.
- No. 4. Upon dress, 31—36.
- N^o. 14. Upon the word honor, 36—41.
- N^o. 16. A political allegory, 42—46.
- No. 19. Upon the bill proposed in parliament, for licensing and regulating the theatres, 46—51.
- N^o 25. On parties, 51—56.
- N^o 30. On the members of parliament retiring into the country at the end of the session, 56—61.
- N^o 32. On affectation, 62—66.
- N^o 33. On female coxcombs, 67—72.
- N^o 37. Humorous paper against the writers for administration, concerning the regulation of the theatres, 72—76.
- N^o 51. Humorous paper on the dangerous situation of the ladies on their first coming to town in January, 77—83.
- N^o 54. Upon gluttony and the luxury of the table, 84—90.
- N^o 57. A vindication of lord Lyttleton against the writers of The Gazetteer, 90—93.
- N^o 89. Humorous and political paper on music, 94—98.
- N^o 93. On the taste for French fashions,

- fashions, 99—104.
 N^o 103. Humorous political paper on the connections between England and Hanover, 104—108.
Coxcombs. Definition of, 62. Varieties of, 63, 64, 65.
 ——— (female). Account of, 67, 72.
Custom. Account of a singular one prevailing in the East, of annually weighing the Mogul, 26, 27. Remarks upon it, 28, 29. Antiquity of it, 29. Application of it to modern times, 29—31.
- D.
- Decorum*. What, 213, 214. Attention to it recommended, 214, 218.
Dress. Remarks upon, 32, 36. Propriety in it recommended, 32, 33. Its advantages, 34.
Drinking. Its pernicious effects, 152, 161.
Duelling. Strictures upon, 186—191. Unknown to the antients, 187. Its origin, ditto. Singular tale of a duel between a man and a dog, 188, 189.
Du Halde (father). A political allegory extracted from his account of China, 42.
- F.
- Fashions (French)*. Absurdity and folly of imitating them, 99, 104.
Fog's Journal (a periodical paper). Extracts from, 1—19.
 N^o 376. Humorous account of a waxen army, 1—8.
 N^o 377. Allegorical and political papers on the ears, 8—14.
 N^o 388. A political paper on the eyes, 14—19.
- G.
- Gin Act*. First speech upon, 242—248. Second ditto, 248—260. Design of it, 242, in the note.
Gluttony. An essay upon, 84, 90.
- H.
- Hammond* (Mr.) Preface to his Elegies, 282, 283.
- Hieroglyphics*. New invention of, 129, 132.
Honor (Men of). Character and account of, 37—41. Letters of, 38, 39, 40. True man of, described, 144.
- I.
- Irvine* (General) Anecdote concerning him, 203, in the note.
- L.
- Ladies*. The dangers they are exposed to on their return to town, 77—83. Their custom of painting censured, 174—178. Advice to them on their going into the country, 199—202.
Letter. Curious one of a son, upon his travels, to his father, 132—138. Of lord Chesterfield to the States General of the United Provinces for taking leave, in 1732, 261—263. Of ditto, to Mr. de Bougainville, 275—277. Of thanks from ditto, on being admitted a foreign member of the academy of inscriptions and belles lettres at Paris, 277—281.
Liotard (Mr.) Anecdote of, 175. Account of ditto in the note.
Lyttelton (lord). Defence of him against the writers of the Gazetteer, 90—93.
- M.
- Metastasio* (Signor). His attempt to improve the Italian opera ill received, 163.
Music. Comparison between the effects of antient and modern, 95, 96, 97.
- N.
- Nostrums and Specifics*. Observations on, 126—129.
- O.
- Old England or the Constitutional Journal* (a periodical paper so called). Extracts from, 108—118. Design of this paper explained, 108, in the note.
 N^o 1. Censure of the ministry, 108—114.
 N^o 3. Humorous account of the conduct of the paper, 114—118.
Opera (Italian). Essay upon, 161—165.

165. Difference between that and the French, 162. Attempts to improve it, 163. Strictures on the performers in it, 164, 165.
- P.
- Parties* (political). Inconvenience of, 51—56.
- Passion*. Ill effects and absurdity of exposed, 218—222.
- Prejudices*. Their utility, 184—186.
- S.
- Scarborough* (earl of). His character, 284—287.
- Singers* (Italian). Strictures upon, 164, 165.
- Sobriety*. Its advantages, 160, 161.
- Speech*. Lord Chesterfield's on the bill for licensing and regulating the theatres, 229—241. First on the gin act, 242—248. Second on ditto, 248—260. On taking leave of the States General, &c. in 1745, 265—267. As lord lieutenant to both houses of Parliament at Dublin, in 1745, 268—270. Ditto in 1746, 270—272.
- T.
- Times*. The degeneracy of them only imaginary, 223—227.
- W.
- World* (the). A periodical paper so called. Extracts from, 118—227.
- N^o 18. Humorous account of a country gentleman going to Paris with his family, 118—126.
- N^o 24. On nostrums and specifics, 126—129. On short writing, 129—132.
- N^o 25. The danger of reading romances, 132—136.
- N^o 29. On the little benefit accruing to Englishmen from their travels, 136—141.
- N^o 49. Ironical commendation of the present times, 142—147.
- N^o 90. Characters of the members of a club, 147—152.
- N^o 91. Description of the author's reception and entertainment at a club, 152—156.
- N^o 92. The author's reflections on the entertainment he met with at the club dinner, 157—161.
- N^o 98. Essay on the Italian opera, 161—165.
- N^o 100. On the necessity of an English dictionary, and the recommendation of Johnson's, 166—169.
- N^o 101. Humorous observations on the English language, 170—174.
- N^o 105. On the prevailing custom of painting among the ladies, 174—178.
- N^o 106. Different opinions of this paper, 179—183.
- N^o 112. On prejudices, 183—186.
- N^o 113. On duelling, 186—191.
- N^o 114. On the pride of birth, 191—195.
- N^o 115. On affectation, 195—198.
- N^o 146. Advice to the ladies on their return into the country, 199—202.
- N^o 148. On civility and good breeding, 203—206.
- N^o 151. On people of fashion, 206—213.
- N^o 189. Upon decorum, 213—218.
- N^o 196. On passion, 218—222.
- N^o 197. On the supposed degeneracy of human nature, 222—227.