TO HIS FRIENDS, BOOK II. LET. XXXIII. XXXIV. 189

I cannot tell you, by the post, who the person was, whom I hinted at, as a candidate for the embassy to the Hague. Lord Holdernesse is the person strongly solicited for, from your side of the water. Should it be he, I think he would chuse to live well with you; but should it be the other, I would be bound for him, that he would be your friend, in consideration of your being mine.

Yours faithfully,

C

LETTER XXXIV.

TO THE SAME.

London, July 2, 1748.

DEAR DAYROLLES,

ORD Pulteney will give you this letter: he is going to Leipfig for tome time, and will not flay long at the Hague; but during his flay there, you will oblige me in obliging him. Pray, prefent him to the prince and princess of Orange, and air him at the affemblies.

My boy goes next spring to Turin to be décrotté, which I am told he wants a good deal. Sir Charles Williams writes me word, that he is very handsome, but very aukward, has a great deal of knowledge, but no manners. Il faut remédier à cela à Turin, et à Paris, après quoi vous y mettrez la dernière main (a).

I go to Cheltenham to-morrow for a fortnight or three weeks, not for any present want of health, but by way of preservative against the autumn, when I am apt to have severs. Good night. Mademoiselle * * * does not love you better than I do.

Yours,

C

LET-

(a) This must be mended at Turin and Paris, and you'll put the finishing hand to it.
