TO HIS FRIENDS. BOOK II. LET. LXVI, LXVII. 231

I know of no one event to communicate to you; there never was so serene a winter as this. I will not trouble you with news so very old, and so long known, as my being

Yours most faithfully,

TOTHESAME. Her are void

London, Feb. 7, O. S. 1752.

DEAR DAYROLLES, Deale strong condi-

AST post brought me your notification of your establishment at Brussels: quod felix faushumque sit! You begin well at least. You are soon to have a colleague there, not as minister, but as commissary for the barrier and the tariss. It was first offered to Tom Page at Chichester, whom I suppose you know; but he resused it: now I believe it will be Mr. Mitchell*, a Scotch member of parliament; he is a sensible good fort of man, and easy to live with.

Though madame Dayrolles has a very good natural color, yet, living with people so highly colored, if I were she, I would allow myself an ounce of red to their pound, which I think would be a fair composition.

All business or expectation of business is over in parliament, which fits now only for details, such as turnpike bills, poor bills, &c. and will certainly rise the first week in April at farthest, when his majesty proposes going to Hanover, to settle the tranquillity of the North. I am called away suddenly: bon jour donc.

* Afterwards fir Andrew Mitchell, knight of the Bath, and envoy extraordinary and plenipotentiary at the court of Berlin.
