ledge. He has desired to go again to Paris; which I have very willingly consented to, as he is received there in the best companies, and employed by Lord Albemarle in the most secret correspondence.—This incident makes me still more desirous than before, that the duke of Newcastle's proposal for him may take place (a); which, together with his being in parliament, as he will be in the next, will put an end to all these discussions. Adieu; I have pelted you lately with so many letters, that you will be afraid, for some time, of every post from England.

Yours most affectionately and sincerely,

C.

L E T T E R LXXVIII.

T O T H E S A M E.

London, Dec. 14, 1752.

DEAR DAYROLLES,

I Returned here yesterday from Bath, the better in my health, but little so in my hearing, for the stay I made there. The bathing, and pumping my head, did me a great deal of good at first; but I gradually lost what ground I had gained, and am now just as deaf as when I went there. Thus deaf, and not having been four and twenty hours in town, you will easily judge that I have seen little, and heard less. * * * * *

Your little friend and servant is at Paris, where he will continue three or four months longer, and where I hope he will learn more manners and attentions. If I can get him into this parliament for any of the vacant boroughs, I will; and that, as you justly observe, will remove all difficulties; but I fear they are all engaged. I am hurried at present by visits and ceremonies, though, thank God, not by business; so must abruptly wish you all well, and tell you that I am most sincerely

Yours,

C.
