*Vertentem sese frustra sectabere canthum,
Cum rota posterior curras et in axe secundo.*

GREAT masters in Painting never care for drawing people in the fashion; as very well knowing that the head-dress, or periwig, that now prevails, and gives a grace to their portraitures at present, will make a very odd figure, and perhaps look monstrous in the eyes of posterity. For this reason they often represent an illustrious person in a Roman habit, or in some other dress that never varies. I could wish, for the sake of my country friends, that there was such a kind of everlasting drapery to be made use of by all who live at a certain distance from the town, and that they would agree upon such fashions as should never be liable to changes and innovations. For want of this standing dress, a man who takes a journey into the country is as much surprized, as one who walks in a gallery of old family pictures; and finds as great a variety of garbs and habits in the persons he converses with. Did they keep to one constant dress, they would sometimes be in the fashion, which they never are as matters are managed at present. If instead of running after the mode, they would continue fixed in one certain habit, the mode would some time or other overtake them, as a clock that stands still is sure to point right once in twelve hours: in this case therefore I would advise them, as a Gentleman did his friend who was hunting about the whole town after a rambling fellow, If you follow him you will never find him, but if you plant your self at the corner of any one street, I'll engage it will not be long before you see him.

I have already touched upon this subject, in a Speculation which shews how cruelly the country are led astray in following the town; and equipped in a ridiculous habit, when they fancy themselves in the height of the mode. Since that Speculation I have received a letter (which I there hinted at) from a Gentleman who is now in the Western Circuit.

Mr. SPECTATOR,

“ BEING a Lawyer of the Middle Temple, a Cornishman by birth, I “ generally ride the Western Circuit for my health, and as I am
 “ not interrupted with Clients, have leisure to make many observations “ that escape the notice of my fellow-travellers.

“ One of the most fashionable women I met with in all the Circuit
 “ was my Landlady at Stains, where I chanced to be on a holiday. Her “ commode was not half a foot high, and her petticoat within some yards
 “ of a modish circumference. In the same place I observed a young fel“ low with a tolerable periwig, had it not been covered with a hat that “ was shaped in the Ramillie cock. As I proceeded in my journey I ob“ served the petticoat grew scantier and scantier, and about threescore
 “ miles from London was so very unfashionable, that a woman might walk
 “ in it without any manner of inconvenience.

“ Not far from Salisbury I took notice of a Justice of Peace's Lady,
 “ who was at least ten years behind hand in her dress, but at the same “ time as fine as hands could make her. She was flounced and furbe“ lowed from head to foot; every ribbon was wrinkled, and every part “ of her garments in curl, so that she looked like one of those animals
 “ which in the country we call a Friezland hen.

“ Not many miles beyond this place I was informed that one of the “ last year's little Muffs had by some means or other straggled into those “ parts, and that all the women of fashion were cutting their old Muffs “ in two, or retrenching them, according to the little model which was “ got among them. I cannot believe the report they have there, that it “ was sent down franked by a Parliament-man in a little packet; but “ probably by next winter this fashion will be at the height in the coun“ try, when it is quite out at London.

“ The greatest beau at our next country Sessions was dressed in a most “ monstrous flaxen periwig, that was made in King William's Reign.
 “ The wearer of it goes, it seems, in his own hair, when he is at home,
 “ and lets his wig lye in buckle for a whole half year, that he may put “ it on upon occasion to meet the Judges in it.

“ I must not here omit an adventure which happened to us in a coun“ try church upon the frontiers of Cornwall. As we were in the midst “ of the service, a Lady who is the chief woman of the place, and had “ passed the winter at London with her husband, entered the congrega“ tion in a little head-dress, and a hooped-petticoat. The people, who were

“ were wonderfully startled at such a sight, all of them rose up. Some “ stared at the prodigious bottom, and some at the little top of this “ strange dress. In the mean time the Lady of the Manor filled the “ Area of the church, and walked up to her pew with an unspeakable “ satisfaction, amidst the whispers, conjectures and astonishments of the “ whole congregation.

“ Upon our way from hence we saw a young fellow riding towards “ us full gallop, with a bob-wig and a black silken bag tied to it. He “ stopt short at the coach, to ask us how far the Judges were behind us.
 “ His stay was so very short, that we had only time to observe his new “ silk waistcoat, which was unbuttoned in several places to let us see that “ he had a clean shirt on, which was ruffled down to his middle.

“ From this place, during our progress through the most western parts
 “ of the kingdom, we fancied our selves in King Charles the Second's “ Reign, the people having made very little variations in their dress since “ that time. The smartest of the country Squires appear still in the “ Monmouth cock, and when they go a wooing (whether they have any “ post in the Militia or not) they generally put on a red coat. We were “ indeed very much surprized, at the place we lay at last night, to meet
 “ with a Gentleman that had accoutered himself in a night-cap wig, a “ coat with long pockets and slit sleeves, and a pair of shoes with high “ scollop tops; but we soon found by his conversation that he was a per“ son who laughed at the ignorance and rusticity of the country people, “ and was resolved to live and die in the mode.

“ Sir, If you think this account of my travels may be of any advan“ tage to the publick, I will next year trouble you with such occurrences
 “ as I shall meet with in other parts of England. For I am informed
 “ there are greater curiosities in the Northern Circuit than in the West“ ern; and that a fashion makes its progress much slower into Cumber-
 “ land than into Cornwall. I have heard in particular, that the Steen“ kirk arrived but two months ago at Newcastle, and that there are se“ veral commodos in those parts which are worth taking a journey thi“ ther to see.
