AS I have been an author in various ways and in various forms, somebody or other might think of collecting my works. To prevent this, and at the same time to avoid having pieces attributed to me which I never wrote, and to condemn, by suppressing as far as I can, some which do not deserve publication, I have determined to leave this collection behind me. The approbation bestowed on some part, authorises me to think they are not unworthy of being preserved in this manner. The few pieces which have never appeared before, were either kept back from reasons which exist no longer, or were at the time in their own nature private. I mean, particularly, the Letters addressed to Ministers, or written on political occasions. They are not produced now from any merit in the composition, but as evidences of my own conduct; and, as such, they give me greater satisfaction at this late period than any other part of my writings.

As I have been an author in various ways and in various forms, somebody or other might think of collecting my works, to prevent this and at the same time to avoid having pieces assigned to me which I never wrote, and to contain, by supposing as far as I can, those which do not derive publication, I have determined to leave this notice non behind me. The approbation bestowed on this part authorities me to think they are not unworthy of being published in this manner. The few pieces which have been appeared before, were either kept back from various causes will no longer, or were at the time in their own nature private. I mean, particularly, the Letters addressed to the Bos, or written on political occasions. These are now now been the more in the world, and have been own conduct, and as such, they are the property of the it can be better than any other part of the work.
