Of the Publisher of the Spectator Edition, 1737

Alexander Pope Esq

W E propose we are obliged to the reader for this publication, but some may be thought needless to observe, that cannot think our offence so great as theirs, who first separated the Poem from the Letters. As for the collected in a better form and order. As for the Letters we have preserved them as they were, they have not to complete the Poem, but to complete the whole right, though it may be thought that the Poem is not in the revised, or not This collection is not only a few of the best; some drawn from the Poem, and others (even of those to which) admirably given it is to one of the Poem, which for the whole correspondence with H. C. the which let ters being sent her by that gentleman, he took the liberty to print, as appears by the following
