Appendix E. Translation Of The Amravati Inscriptions, By General Cunningham

NOTE.

In August last, when this work was going to press, Professor Goldstücker brought me a note on the Naga tribes of Cashmere which he had received from H.S.H. Prince Frederick of Schleswig-Holstein, who was then residing in the valley. My intention was to have added this note to this Appendix, but it now turns out most unfortunately that it has been mislaid and cannot be found. This is to be regretted, not only because it was an account of the Nâgas of the present day by a most intelligent and competent observer, but also because the Prince insisted most strongly on the medical qualities of the tribe, and their possession of nostrums which had been handed down from remote antiquity. This retention of the Esculapian character by the snake worshippers is one of the most curious points connected with the subject, but it is one that, now that attention is directed to it, will I trust meet with full elucidation from some inhabitant of the valley.

APPENDIX E.

THE Amravati inscriptions are similar to those on the Railings and Gateways of the Buddhist Stupas and Monasteries at Bhilsa and other places. They are all written in the Pali language; and, where not injured by weather or breakage, they are generally clear and legible. With two exceptions they have been all copied by myself from the sculptured slabs, and have since been compared with the photographs. The two exceptions are Nos. II. and XI., which have been taken from Colonel Mackenzie's drawings. The former is a good copy, and is mostly legible; but the latter is unfortunately a very corrupt transcript of the most important of all the Amravati records, as it certainly contains the name of a King, which, if it had been faithfully copied, would most probably have enabled us to fix the date of the inscription.

The following translations are not offered as critical renderings of the inscriptions, but simply as free versions conveying their general meaning, which is usually confined to the specification of certain gifts made to the sacred edifice by various individuals, both priests and laymen, in which they were frequently joined by their wives and children. The same practice is still common in Burmah and in other Buddhist countries.

Some of the words which are of unusual occurrence require explanation. In No. IV. I have rendered gharani, by "wife," that is, the mistress of the house. The present Hindi form is gharwali. The word patâ occurs three times in Nos. II., XI., and XX., and the word pataka three times in Nos. IV., XIV., and XX. As both words are combined with figures in No. XX., I take them to be the names of the particular gifts thus recorded, and consequently that they refer to the sculptured stones themselves. Patâ is most probably the same word as the present Hindi Patao, which means a "broad stone slab," and is specially applicable to the Amravati railing stones, in which the breadth is equal to three times the depth. Both names are derived from the Sanskrit pâţa, breadth, from the root pata, to spread or extend. The word pataka, or in No. XX. bataka, is spelt with the dental t, and is most probably therefore not connected with pata, which invariably has the cerebral t. I conclude that it must be the name for a railing pillar, because it is found in Nos. IV, and XIV. recorded on the tops of two of them. The name used for a square or octagonal pillar is thabho (see No. III.) from the Sanskrit stambha. In No. XX, we have a record of two Patas and three Patakas, which I believe to refer to three broad slab pillars of the railing, and the two architrave slabs that covered them. I cannot suggest any explanation of the word vetika, which occurs in No. XI., but I conclude that it is the name of some one of the sculptured slabs, as it is coupled with pata.

I. (Gift) of the householder Maditi's daughters Urvâsika, Sangha-Rakshitâ, Sabhâsakâ, (and) Sabhâspirinâ, together with their sons, and the slave Arjuna, and the slave (San)gha, . . .

II. Pious gift of the Buddhist Nagamuli, and of the Buddhist Balinanda, Pusiliyas (? descendants of Pusili).

Gift of their sisters, of their sons-in-law, and of their (—?—), and of all friends, to the great Chaitya of Bhagavata of a slab enshrined tooth (?)

III. Pious gift of a pillar (the remainder is unintelligible).

IV. Be it auspicious! Pious gift of two slabpillars of Tunulauraka, the householder, son of Pusili, and of Sasivaka, the chief Banker, and of his wife Munuri, and of his son-in-law Vachitu, and of his son-in-law Vichita, and of his son-inlaw Mahajeva; his daughter Budha, his daughter Chandrapusa, (and) his daughter Charma.

V. Pillar gift to the Chaitya of Hagha of Gadhika, together with his son and his daughter.

VI. Imperfect,—but enough remains to show that the inscription is of the usual form, and records the gift of the householder Dhana-mitra, and of his son-in-law, his daughter, &c.

VII. At the end of the last line but one I read the word $Mah\hat{a}chetiya$.

VIII. This inscription is engraved on five small pillars or stelæ, on one of the sculptured representations of a Stupa. Many of the letters are quite clear and distinct; but no part can be read with certainty.

IX. This is the most valuable of all the Amravati inscriptions; but unfortunately the slab has not come to England, and there is only a copy made by a draughtsman to refer to. The title of Maharaja is distinct in the last line but one, and the name following it appears to be Yadnya, who was one of the last of the Andhra kings.

XI. Pious gift to the Chaitya of a Vetika and a slab, of the householder ——patiputra, and of Haghasabhá, and of Savaná.

XII. Not read.

XIII. Gift of Lonavalavaka, and Sanghirakshita, and Mariti, and of their wives Sanghâ, and Sanghadâsi, and Kumâdri.

XIV. Gift of Akarâ's mother of a slab-pillar.

XV. Pious gift of ——dakicha, the householder, and his son, and his (-?-).

XVI. Nineteen pious gifts of Akhasavâdi and Samariti, householders.

XVII. Gift of Pâpi, householder of Valikachaka, and of his wife the grand-daughter of Kanhâ.

XVIII. Pious gift of a Lion-pedestal of the Thera (Sthâvira or Elder) Bhayata Budhi, the enlarger of the Chaitya, and of his sister the Nun Budhâ.

XIX. -(first part not read.)

Pious gift of Agheya Vachakita Vira, pupil of Budha Rakshita.

XX. Parts of this inscription are not intelligible;

A. CUNNINGHAM, Major-General R.E.

NOTE.

The principal points of interest in these inscriptions, with reference to the preceding text, are the allusions to the Tooth relic in No. II., to Yâdnya Śri in No. IX., and to the Mahâ Chaitya of Dhanakakata in the last. If on further investigation their correctness should be established, the history of the monument can hardly be considered doubtful.-J. F.
