The image shows the front cover of an antique book. The cover is made of a light-colored, heavily textured material, possibly vellum or aged paper, which is significantly worn and discolored. Large areas of the surface are missing, particularly along the edges and corners, revealing a dark, reddish-brown board underneath. The binding is visible at the top and bottom edges, showing frayed and torn fibers. A small, rectangular, brown paper label is attached to the bottom center of the cover. The label has the letters "Th" written in black ink, followed by the number "4791".
