men omnino consuetas, quia ea que sunt in consueta magis miramur, & sic in eis animus magis & uenientius detinetur: ex quo fit, quod corum, qui in pueritia uidimus, magis memoremur. Ideo autem necessaria est huiusmodi similitudinem, uel imaginum ad intentionem, quia intentiones simplices & spirituales facilius ex anima elabuntur, nisi quibusdam similitudinibus corporalibus quasi alligentur: quia humana cognitione potentior est circa sensibilia, unde & memorativa ponitur in parte sensitiva. Secundo, oportet, ut homo ea quae memoriter uult tenere, sua cōsideratione ordinate disponat, ut ex uno memorato facile ad aliud procedatur. Vnde Philo dicit lib. * de Memoria. A locis uidemur rem infra aliq[ua]n. Causa autem est, quia uelociter ab alio in aliud uenit. Tertio, oportet, ut homo sollicitudinem apponat, & affectum adhibeat ad ea, quae uult memorari: quia quanto aliiquid magis fuerit impressum animo, tanto minus elabitur. Vnde & Tullius dicit in sua Rhetorica, quod sollicitudo cōseruat integras simulacra figurā. Quar to, oportet, quod ea frequenter meditemur, quae uolumus memorari. Vnde Philo dicit in lib. * de Memoria, quod meditationes memoriam saluant, quia, ut in eodem dicitur, consuetudo est quasi natura. Vnde quod multotiens intelligimus, cito reminiscimur, quasi naturali quadam ordine ab uno ad aliud procedentes.

A D T E R T I U M dicendum, quod ex præteritis oportet nos quasi argumentum sumere de futuris: & ideo memoria præteriorum necessaria est ad bene confilandum de futuris.
