

Center for the History of Women Philosophers and Scientists
Paderborn University, Germany

God's Mind and Human Knowledge in Damaris Cudworth Masham (1659–1708)

Jacqueline Broad
Monash University

Nicolas Malebranche's doctrine of "vision in God" is the epistemological theory that all the ideas in our minds are located in the divine understanding. On this view, our ideas are neither produced nor created by us; rather, we perceive ideas only by virtue of the fact that our minds participate in the mind of God. In her Discourse concerning the love of God (1696), Damaris Cudworth Masham challenges the Malebranchean doctrine of "seeing all things in God" and the related theory that God is the sole efficient cause of all our sensations (occasionalism). She specifically targets her English contemporary John Norris's view that we are obliged to love and desire God alone, a moral theology based upon the Malebranchean doctrines.

As a Lockean empiricist, Masham maintains that human knowledge consists in the perception of the agreement or disagreement of ideas derived from sensation and reflection (1705: 61). In her opinion, we can love God only once we have formed an idea of love, and yet to form this idea, we must have had pleasing sensory experiences of other human beings and material objects. It follows that it is necessary to love other creatures before we can love God himself. But if this involuntary love is wicked, as Norris suggests, then God has compelled us to become wicked by nature. Alternatively, if we agree with Malebranche's theory of "vision in God" and his occasionalism, then we must accept that our idea of love comes from God, and that God himself inclines us toward the love of sensual pleasure; that is, that God himself excites the sentiment of pleasure in his creatures, whenever they are disposed to be wicked (1696: 102). In Masham's view, both positions are untenable. While we must love God above all things, it is still nevertheless lawful to desire his creatures.

Primary Sources:

Astell, Mary; Norris, John 2005. Letters concerning the love of God. Taylor, E. D. & New, M.

(eds.). Aldershot, UK: Ashgate.

Malebranche, Nicolas 1997. The search after truth. Lennon, T. M. & Olscamp, P. J. (eds. & trans.). Cambridge: Cambridge University Press.

Masham, Damaris Cudworth 1696. A Discourse concerning the love of God. London: Awnsham and John Churchill.

_____ 1705. Occasional thoughts, in reference to a vertuous or Christian life. London: A. and J. Churchill.

Norris, John 1693. Practical discourses upon several divine subjects. London: S. Manship.

Secondary Sources:

Broad, Jacqueline 2002. Women philosophers of the seventeenth century. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 114-40.

Hutton, Sarah 1993. Damaris Cudworth, Lady Masham: between Platonism and enlightenment, in British journal for the history of philosophy 1, no. 1, 29-54.

_____ 2014. Lady Damaris Masham, in: Zalta, E. N. (ed.): The Stanford encyclopedia of philosophy. URL: <http://plato.stanford.edu/archives/spr2014/entries/lady-masham> [18|09|2018].

Penaluna, Regan 2007. The social and political thought of Damaris Cudworth Masham, in: Broad, Jacqueline & Green, Karen (eds.): Virtue, liberty, and toleration: political ideas of European women, 1400-1800. Dordrecht: Springer, 111-22.

Springborg, Patricia 1998. Astell, Masham, and Locke: religion and politics, in: Smith, H. L. (ed.): Women writers and the early modern British political tradition. Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 105-25.

Keywords:

Nicolas Malebranche, John Norris, Lockeanism, vision in god, empiricism, occasionalism, love of god, ideas