

This work describes the allocation and management of distributed heterogeneous resources connected via an arbitrary network. The focus of this work is to overcome dynamical behavior of connected resource nodes. It mainly considers the efficiency of operations needed to resolve the heterogeneity of nodes and to ensure the availability of items. The presented methods are mainly discussed in the area of storage networks.